Henry Tudor, son of Edmund, Earl of Richmond, and the 13 year old Margaret Beaufort, was not born to be King of England. The baby boy that was born in Pembroke castle on the 28th January 1457 was born into a dangerous world, especially for a Lancastrian.	Yorkists kidnapped him as a young boy when they took Pembroke castle, and he spent some time in the custody of the Duke Of York, who had claimed the throne just before Henry's birth.	In 1471, at the age of 14, he left Britain to live in exile in Brittany. While there, under the guardianship of his uncle Jasper, his preparation for kingship began. (He was one of the few remaining Lancastrian claimants in the 1470s.)
Then in 1485, with the backing of the King of France, and still only 27, he began his bid for the English throne. He landed on the Welsh shore and marched through Wales to the midlands, gathering support as he went.	He met Richard III and his forces just outside the small market town of Market Bosworth, where, for the last time in English history, an English king (Richard III) was defeated and killed in battle. Henry claimed the crown for himself (once it had been retrieved from a nearby bush - allegedly).	Henry's marriage to Elizabeth of York united the two warring families. The red rose of Lancashire was entwined with the white rose of Yorkshire to produce the Tudor rose.
