OPPORTUNITIES

National Care Leavers' Month exists for the public, professionals, carers, decision-makers and the media to come together, celebrate care leavers and raise awareness of the issues in the care system.

Care-experienced and want to understand more about UCAS and how to apply to University? This free online workshop delivered by Become's Propel into Education team will explain:

- An in-depth look at UCAS applications.
- Specific guidance for care-experienced students.
- Concerns or questions care-experienced students may have.

Taking place online on Wednesday 18th November from 6pm.

Starting or continuing university can be exciting, but it can also feel overwhelming at times. This free online workshop will cover:

- Tips for managing stress, staying organised and looking after your wellbeing.
- Where to find support from your university, including wellbeing, counselling and academic support.
- Student networks, communities and ways to connect with other care-experienced students.
- Additional grants, bursaries and financial support available to care-experienced students.

The free support available from Propel into Education and Become. Taking place online on Wednesday 25th November from 6pm.

Care Leaver Covenant is an opportunities directory that includes graduate schemes, internships, entry-level jobs, apprenticeships and work experience, with employers committed to supporting care leavers. Current examples include Sky's 2027 graduate and summer internship programmes, Ringway's infrastructure careers and NHS-related opportunities.

Connects is a dedicated platform for care leavers and support workers. It provides exclusive access to opportunities in education, work, wellbeing, money and your home. As a valued member of Connects, you will be kept up to date with opportunities and offers as well as the information and support available to you.

Watch the University of Bath's videos featuring care-experienced students sharing their stories, challenges, and successes at university. From overcoming challenges before and during university life to finding a sense of belonging within our community, their stories shine a light on both the barriers they have faced and the support that has helped them succeed.

JOB OF THE WEEK

Futurist

A futurist (or futurologist) is someone who systematically studies current trends, patterns, and data to explore possible, probable, and preferable futures for human society and organisations.

Rather than crystal-ball "prediction," futurists use strategic frameworks, signal scanning, and trend identification to map out multiple potential scenarios over 10-to-100+ year horizons.

LABOUR MARKET INFORMATION FACT

You may be wondering why National Care Leavers Month and supporting students who have been in care is so important. Well, 15% of young people from a care background in England go to university by age 19, compared to 46% of their non-care-experienced peers, so it is about equality and ensuring everyone has support to be successful.

EMPLOYER SPOTLIGHT

Capgemini is a global technology and consulting company that helps organisations use technology to solve problems and improve how they work. Its employees work across areas such as software, cloud computing, cyber security, data, artificial intelligence and business consulting. Early career opportunities can include apprenticeships, degree apprenticeships and graduate programmes, allowing young people to build valuable digital and professional skills while working with major organisations.

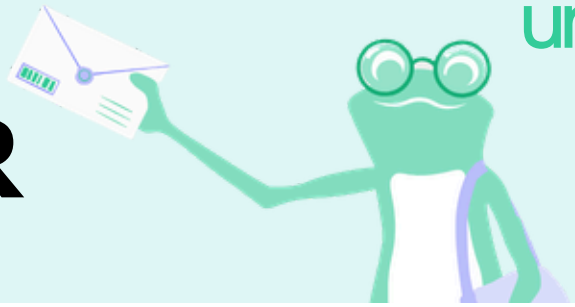

UNI SPOTLIGHT

Durham University is a historic university in North East England with a distinctive collegiate system. Students belong to a college alongside their academic department, creating opportunities to participate in sports, societies and social activities within a smaller community. Courses span sciences, humanities, social sciences and business. Durham could particularly suit students attracted to a traditional university environment that combines academic study with a strong sense of community.
